

Firestone

Introducing new lighter weight air springs from Firestone Industrial Products, the World's Number 1 Air Spring™ manufacturer.

Our new air spring bellows design has a more durable fabric cord material that delivers longer life and reduces overall product weight. The new, lighter weight air springs have passed the same rigorous testing standards that all of our products receive.

The next generation of Firestone Airide™ air springs will meet or exceed current performance levels, which means a lower cost of ownership. We believe so strongly in our air spring innovation that we have increased our warranty to 3 years/300,000 miles on all of our Airide™ air springs (North America only).

With this change in design, there will be some changes in part appearance. These changes have no impact on the performance of the parts, but it is necessary to bring them to the attention of our customers. These new parts have the same load rating and ride at the same design height as the previous parts.

Product appearance changes:

Bellows shows: "1T15ZR-6"

Bellows shows: "1T15X series"
"C01-358-0583"

In its free state, the new assembly will appear taller due to the design changes that needed to be made to meet the same operating conditions that our previous Airide air springs faced. THE NEW PART WILL OPERATE AT THE SAME HEIGHT AS THE OLD PART. It is acceptable to use one of our older generation springs and our newer generation springs on the same axle; it will not affect product performance.
